AN ACQUITTAL ALMOST CERTAIN

Nemo repente full turpissimus. This maxim is most as old as the everiasting hills, and is likely e exist as long. That a woman should suddenly all from a position of exalted virtue to a depth eached, is an anomaly which the human mind canoredit. The annals of crime furnish no parallel, and the instincts of human nature revolt at such an hypothesis. The stern judgment of public opinion, ch is ever more stubborn in proportion to its ecuracy, is beginning to relax, and a spirit tardy justice is at length manifesting itself towards the unfortunate lady who, for six weary months, has been bowed, but not broken, der the weight of an apparently false accusate All classes, grades, professions and occupations in ociety have been marshaled upon the witness to reader an account of the private life of this martyr to public opinion and the ill-considered effusions of careless newspapers, and but one sentiment has up to this time been expressed, which is, that she possessed the qualities of amiability, kindness, gentleness and humanity in the highest degree. I wish I could be allowed to say what I know personally of her. Persons of op-posing political opinions; men who have fought against each other with the tigerish hate which only civil strife can arouse; the lawyer who thought he was oppressed by his fellow during the iate war and the barrister who surrendered the comforts and luxuries of professional life at the mmens of his country in the hour of trial, all we joined hands in this instance and have come apolis with the common object of adding their testimony to the pure and blameless life which the gentle prisoner has exhibited to the world from her infancy to the present moment. Persons who have all along persisted in her guilt, and their name is legion, despite the overwhelming case hich the defence has established, are beginning debate in their own minds whether it is possible that such a lovely woman could deliberately poison to death her degrest friend, without a conceivable on for so horrid a crime. This question leads others. The mists of prejudice are gradually dis nd a clearer, brighter future opens for the chappy prisoner than she has ever had cause to ope for since the wiid and reckiess raid of the Baire public in last July, increased and intensified timore public in last July, increased and intensified by the extravagent vagaries of the winder nursing of the Maryland University.

This morning's proceedings commenced with the examination of withesses as to character, and a very decided interest was manifested by all present. The jury looked fresh, and for a while were on the full wind to catch every expression that fell irom the tips of the witnesses, but upon the calling of an export to the stand, relapsed into a "semi-comatose state," and so remained until more interesting and exciting subjects were effered for their consideration. General Hancook stopped in Annapolis last night and was the recipient of graceful attentions from a number of the more prominent citizens. His name having been mentioned in connection with the Presidency, many of the leading democratic politicians paid their respects to him. The court room was again crowded to-day, the ladies appearing in large force. Among the audience were noticeable Rev. Dr. C. K. Nelson, Vice President of St. Johns College; Judge Price, of Rarford county; Colonel Renty D. Loney, of the Fifth regiment, M. G., and the Rev. Dr. Leesa, Mrs. Wharton's pas-tor.

large number of the cases during the epidemic, and sometimes saw sporadic care, in which the emptows resemble the epidemic; he had seen no very violent case. Wheel seerthed the symptoms which appeared in mass of cases, but as a general rule the symptom of no two cases are exactly alike. This witness has not willing to attempt to identify the cases has not willing to attempt to identify the cases has not willing to attempt to identify the cases has not willing to attempt to identify the cases has not willing to attempt to identify the cases has not willing to attempt to identify the cases has not willing to attempt to identify the cases has not willing to attempt to identify the cases has a seembled in its symptoms cerebro-chinal meningitis; he had had a larger experience in the treatment of the disease than any other witness yet placed upon the stand, with the exception of Dr. McClurg. He described all the symptoms which he had observed very infinitely, as also the symptoms of poisoning by tartar emetic. He said that upon being summoned to a case of cerebro-spinal meningitis, on one occasion, he was suffering from metallic poison, but very soon detected the symptoms of the disease.

The defence proposed to examine this witness as a chemical expert, but the State objected, on the ground that he was not an expert.

Dr. Claude said that though he had recently accepted the position of Professor of Natural Sciences he had not yet had occasion to instruct upon anasytical chemistry, and very modestly said he did not consider himself competent as an expert on that subject, and the Courts or ruled.

Dr. Claude was cross-examined at great length by the State, and in the course of his examination Mr. Syester proposed to read from the London Medical Times and Gazette.

The defence objected that the unaccredited essays of obscare physicians were not authorities, either in law or medicine, and that this particular essay, which was written on the case of the jury in that case, was especially exceptionable and contrary to the law.

All, Syester disclaimed any intention of reading any portion of the essay which dwelt upon the case of Palmer, but contended that it mattered little what book was used in reading, as in many cases the best accredited opinions in the books grew out of the cagerness of physicians to see themselves in print, and that they very often served as an advertisement.

of the eagerness of physicians to see themselves in print, and that they very often served as an advertisement.

Passive and active congestion of the brain, the fundiment and non-explosive forms of cerebro spinal meningitis, were very fully explained by the witness, as also the difference between fetention and suppression of urine; in other words, the same ground was gone over which had been traversed by the other medical experts in the case, and at ten minutes after two o'clock the witness was permitted to leave the stand.

The testimony in reference to the character and reputation of Mrs. Wharton was then resumed.

Mrs. Samuel E. Smitt, a young married laily, was next called to the stand. Mrs. Smith 18 a lady of refinement and culture, and moved in the same circle with the prisoner. She was dressed in black and appeared very beautiful from the witness box, which was doubless helpitened by the evident embarrassment which the novelty of her position created. She said she had known the prisoner six or seven years; had known her very well; she was an upright, religious woman, and always had been so; she possessed all the qualities embraced in the question of the defence, viz., kindness, amiability and numanity; she thought Mrs. Wharton was kinder than most persons and more charkable. Upon cross-examination she said she had associated with Mrs. Wharton's friends, and had heard them speak of her good qualities.

This witness is the wife of the son of Mr. Samuel Smith, of Park street, the daughter of Thomas W. Levering.

Rev. Dr. Leeds, the pastor of Grace church, Baltimore, a fine looking gentleman, in clerical gare, Levering.

THE VASTOR OF GRACE CHURCH, RALTIMORE.

Rev. Dr. Leeds, the pastor of Grace church, Baltimore, a fine looking gentleman, in clerical garb, next testified. He said he had lived in Baltimore since April 26, 1867, which was the day of his institution; he had known the prisoner for four years, during which time she had been a communicant in his church; her general reputation for kindness, amiability and humanity was very good; there was no blemish upon her name in any of those points; she was above criticism so far as he had known. Upon cross-examination he said he had not heard her spoken of frequently; Mrs. Wharton, since his acquaintance with her, has been under affliction; he had heard her spoken of in the intimacy of private friendship and under the nousehold roofs, and from their lips he had heard out one testimony, and inat was in her favor; this was long before this charge was brought against her; eparticularly referred to a year ago last summer. General Reads was then sworn:—He said he lived long before this charge was brought against her; he particularly referred to a year ago last summer.

General Fields was then sworn:—He said he lived in Baltimore; he was in the old army from 1849 to 1861, when he resigned and went South; he had known the prisoner from December, 1840; he first met her at Fort Leavenworth; he was in the dragoons and Windton was in the infantry; they were stationed at the same post for five or six months; he met her again in 1859 and 1860; they met at West Point, where he was stationed and she was visiting; he had met her since; they were in the same garrison for five or six months; it was a small garrison, and the intercourse was very close; he had never heard her character questioned; it was as fair as it could be.

THOMAS RING, OF HARPORD COUNTY.

Mr. Thomas King, of Harpord county, Maryland, testified that he had known Mrs. Wharlon very well for six or eight years; he had visited her in Baltimore and in Harlord county; her reputation was very good; indeed, her amiabicross, gentleness and charity, in the opinion of others, were proverbial.

General Lookwood was then sworn.

He said he lived in Georgetown, B. C.: he was and charity, in the opinion of others, were proverbial.

GENERAL LOCKWOOD WAS THEN SWORN.

He said he lived in Georgetown, D. C.; he was Professor of Mathematics in the United States Navy; was at presens stationed at the Naval Observatory; he knew the prisoner; made her acquaintaice in 1801, at Cambridge; he afterwards knew her very well at Drummondtown, and subsequently met her repeatedly in Baltmore, his acquaintaine extending over a period of three years; he commanded as brigade of United States troops at Cambridge, and Colonel Wharton commanded one of his regiments. The General spoke very highly of Mrs. Wharton, and Mr. Steele asked for his opinion as to her analability, kindness and humanity, and the General said as he had never heard anybody abuse her, he took it for granted that she was very amiable. In reference to ner humanity he heard of several instances where she had relieved the sufferings and done charitable acts for the soldiers. He was here stopped by the State, and he concluded by saying her reputation on these points was very good.

BOSS TWEED'S CASE.

Appeal from the Motion for the Reduction of Bail in the Case of William M. Tweed.

Arguments of Counsel at the General DATES OF DEPARTURE FROM NEW YORK Term-The Decision of the Court Reserved.

ALBANY, Jan. 12, 1872. The case of William M. Tweed was brought up to-day in the General Term of the Supreme Court. Notwithstanding the interesting proceedings of the Legislature there was a good attendance in Court

The proceedings were on appeal from the de-cision of Judge Learned denying the motion for a

THE ARGUMENT. Mr. John E. Burrell, counsel for Tweed, opened the argument. Judge Learned founds his denial of sented on the part of Tweed, and this circumstance he considered sufficient to justify him in refusing of bail. Mr. Burrill argued that the practice was in merits of the action, and that the truth of the alle-gations in the complaint will not be tried collect-rally or upon addavit, but only on a trial of issues raily or upon affidavit, but only on a trial of issues raised in the answer, so that had the defendant denied most emphatically every allegation in the complaint, such denial could not have availed him. Counsel's next point was that the bail required was unusual and unreasonable, and not warrantable or justified by the facts of the case. He submitted that in every view of the case it was excessive. The State constitution provides that 'excessive ball should not be required;' a similar provision is found in the constitution of the United States. The prohibition is applicable equally to civil as to criminal cases. Formerly the right to hold to ball existed in action for debt. Great changes have taken place during the past twenty-five years on this subject. Chitty says that magistrates must take care lest, under the pretence of demanding sufficient surety, they make ball so excessive a requisition as in effect to amount to a denial of ball.

THE FRIENDLY JALLORS OF AN INDIVIDUAL

trates must take care lest, under the pretence of demanding sufficient surety, they make bail so excessive a requisition as in effect to amount to a denial of bail.

THE PRIENDLY JAILORS OP AN INDIVIDUAL who called him in $50,000 will vigitantly guard their prisoner. If the amount is raised to $100,000 how much more is the vigitance to be increased? If to $200,000 how much more? In two capital cases, one reported by Barber and the other hy Parker, bail was fixed at $6,000. During the past twenty years the highest sum exacted for bail in a civil case was $250,000. Those who go bail for a party have the right to arrest him. They may tkee him in all places and surrender him in case ne fulls in his obedience to the process of the Court. This power has been given to bail for the purpose of encuraging men to incur responsibility as bail with a latter of the process of the Court and the with the courty of the law always favors. The bail in the present case is excessive, in view of the penalties and punishment to which the defendant is liable. The worst that can happen Tweed, in case indigment is recovered, is that he chimpresoned in the county yail or wintin jail liberties for three months, when, on potition and fourteen days' notice, he may be discharged from imprisonment under the Insoivent law. Counsel then cited the Cases of Colonel, guar Ann JEFFERSON DAVIS. The former was bailed in $10,000 and the interior days of the county of New York, who was responsible for defendant until bail justified, has his bond fixed at only $20,000—a fact which goes to show the unreasonableness of the claim for bail made in this case. To justify the large amount of bail demanded from the defendant, not a single fact is set up in the plaintiff's affidix, except those claimed to constitute the cause of action. The counsel then argued at length that the complaint failed to show that the defendant has been guity of any such acts as to justify bail in $1,000,000. The Charge against Tweed is that he was president of the Board of Supervisor in the complaint; if such exist, can be remedied by amendment; they have no effect to work the release of this defendant. Mr. O'Conor then stated in brief the points of the argument which he etaborated last week in the Connolly case, as to the right of the people of the State to bring this action.

Mr. David Dudley Field rejoined. He devoted his hour to consideration of two points:

First | Is the amount of ball excessive, supposing there is a cause of action?

Second—Have the people any right to bring this action?

As to the first point, Mr. Field's argument, was sup-there is a cause of action?

Second—Have the people any right to bring this action?

As to the first point, Mr. Field's argument was substantially the same as that presented to Judge Learned. The object of ball was not to imprison, but to secure attendance. It bail can be exacted in the amount fixed in this action, what citizen of the State—with three or four exceptions—but is liable in civil suit to be thrown into prison, to remain there until released by the slow process of the Insolvent act? Mr. Fields cited several authorities in support of his position that bail in $1,000,000 was excessive. As to his second point, counsel denied strennously that the people had any right to bring this action. If any claim exists it is in favor of the county, and not of the State. It will not be contended that both the county and State can recover. Tweed cannot be made to pay twice. The county can sue as a body corporate, represented by its Board of Supervisors. The Revised Statutes provide that each county, as a body corporate, can sue and be sued.

THE COUNTY OF NEW YOR.

The statues of 1867, '68, '69 all contain provisions respecting the county of New York and recognizing its corporate capacity. In conclusion counsel said that the Island of Manhattan was abundantly able to take care of itself, and any attempt to delegate its duties to the Attoriey General and the State lended to that heenes in negligence of local daty, to which the present frauds are in a great measure attributable.

At the conclusion of Mr. Field's argument the attributable.

At the conclusion of Mr. Field's argument the Court took the papers, reserving its decision.
